Urges Provision For Mental Defectives

Children's Bureau Issues a Starting Report on Conditions in Washington.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—The federal children's bureau issues today a report on "Mental Defectives in the District of Columbia."

The District has at present no institution for the care of such cases, and this study was made to secure as complete an enumeration as possible of mental defectives of the District who may be assumed to need the protection of an institution. Only those cases were included concerning whom information could be obtained from public and private agencies, teachers, physicians and others dealing with defectives.

In this study the bureau's investigators find 793 individuals as defective mentally as to need institutional care. Only 12 per cent are reported as under care.

Thirty-four per cent are in institutions not equipped for their care or boarded out.

Fifty-four per cent are at large in the community under varying conditions of helplessness and neglect.

Two hundred and seventy-two cases are those of children under 15 years old. Only a very small percentage of these children are maintained in training schools for the feeble-minded in neighboring states.

A large number of individual cases are described, illustrating the various types for whom institutional care is desirable. These include cases where mental defect has been transmitted from one generation to another.

Feeble-minded mothers of from one to six illegitimate children are reported. The children cared for at public expense—but no provision made for protecting the mothers. Twenty-six per cent of the total number of defectives found are women between the ages of 15 and 45.

The data gathered furnish evidence as to the individual suffering and degeneration, the burden to families, the handicap to the school system, and the danger to the whole community from the lack of proper provision for the feeble-minded.

The newer state institutions of the last 20 years follow the colony, or village, plan of organization so-called. This requires large acreage, with training school, farm, shops, and many detached cottages. Rough, uncleaned land has been found to provide work for the able-bodied men and boys in the colony, but no provision for constructing the necessary farm buildings, and preparing the land for agricultural purposes. "Farm colonies and industrial institutions have proved," the report says, "that mental defectives in some cases may be made self-supporting, a condition which not only relieves society of the burden of their care, but turns their energies into useful and happy homes."

Adequate provision for the best modern care of the feeble-minded in the capital city of the nation is strong. It is pointed out that such care would be a financial economy. In addition, "the social economy that results from the prevention of criminality and defect cannot be estimated in figures but it is hardly to be questioned that the investment would result in savings compounded with each generation."

KLINGLER FUNERAL IS HELD ON THURSDAY

Services Are Carried Out Along Plans Made by Mr. Klingler Before His Death.

Funeral services for Gus Klingler, former township trustee, who died Tuesday morning at Webster City, Ia., were held at the residence, 427 W. Lasalle av., this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The services were carried out along plans made by Mr. Klingler shortly before his death. The Masonic funeral service was used and Rev. Charles A. Lippincott, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, officiated at the house. In accordance with Mr. Klingler's expressed desire, Thomas A. Slick, a past worshipful master of South Bend lodge, No. 294, F. & A. M., officiated at Riverview cemetery.

Shortly before Mr. Klingler left on Thursday for Webster City, he dictated to County Auditor Clarence Sedgewick plans for his funeral service. He asked that the Masonic funeral service be used and that the Masonic quartet furnish certain music including the hymns, "Heaven's My Home" and "The Church is the Body of Christ." He chose as his pallbearers, O. A. Clark, George A. Knoblock, Clarence Sedgewick, Clyde M. Valentine, Paul Pragg and Chester R. Montgomery.
